Eulogy

It happens on a Monday, at 11:20 A.M., as tower guards eat sandwiches and seagulls drift by on the Tigris River.
Prisoners tilt their heads to the west though burlap sacks and duct tape blind them.
The sound reverberates down concertina coils
the way piano wire thrums when given slack.
And it happens like this, on a blue day of sun, when Private Miller pulls the trigger to take brass and fire into his mouth:
the sound lifts the birds up off the water,
a mongoose pauses under the orange trees,
and nothing can stop it now, no matter what blur of motion surrounds him, no matter what voices crackle over the radio in static confusion, because if only for this moment the earth is stilled, and Private Miller has found what low hush there is down in the eucalyptus shade, there by the river.

PFC B. MILLER

This is war, then: All is well.
The missiles bomb the cities, and the airplanes bid the clouds farewell.
It is nothing but a corpse which grows and stretches...
Between time and time,
Between blood and blood.
All is well.
