

Acknowledge Your Abilities

Chances are that you're able to do quite a few things! Just look at what you're able to accomplish in your academic, social, work and extracurricular life. These abilities can lend a clue as you determine which major to pursue.

So, take stock of your abilities by asking yourself a few questions:

-What were my best subjects in high school?

-What are my best subjects so far in college?

-What talents have I used in my past jobs?

-What abilities help me do a good job during community service projects?

-What skills do I bring to my extracurricular activities?

-What talents would I like to develop?
