SOUTH CAROLINA ASSOCIATION OF PERIANESTHESIA NURSES

SCAPAN CORE PURPOSE

The core purpose of the South Carolina Association of PeriAnesthesia Nurses is to promote excellence in all aspects of PeriAnesthesia Nursing practice through education, specialty certification, nursing research, support for specialty certification, and ASPAN Standards in an environment this is respectful of others and adaptive to change

President's Message

Dear SCAPAN Members,

I hope everyone is enjoying the start of their summer. The warm months bring the end of school and the start of vacations. Somehow it seems that schedules are busier now than before. National Conference was in April and as usual was an amazing experience. I learned so much and I am thankful for the opportunity to attend on your behalf.

The Representative Assembly saw the passage of some changes to the Standards, as well as, the election of a new ASPAN board. We are blessed to have wise and knowledgeable leaders at the national level.

Speaking of leadership, SCAPAN is looking for people who are interested in participating at the local and state levels in our home components. It doesn't matter if you have previous experience or not. I certainly didn't, but I was guided by those who had served before me. All three districts (Piedmont, Central Midlands and Coastal) would love to have new ideas and input from their members.

Just a reminder, summer school is coming up August 13th and Fall conference is October 15th. We are looking forward to some wonderful speakers and the chance to expand our knowledge and improve our practice.

Have a great summer!

Rebecca

Nurse Discipline Bill (S-731) is DEAD!!

Faye Baker, MSN, APRN, CCNS, CNS-CP, CPAN

In March 2015, the Senate Medical Affairs Subcommittee advanced legislation that would provide for the revocation of a nurse's license if it was found that the nurse overmedicated or under-medicated a patient as a result of misreading a physician's order. This bill evolved from a complaint filed by the family of Samuel Cutliff. The Cutliffs testified that they lost their son Samuel in 2012 after he received a higher than prescribed dose of morphine from a nurse providing care in his home. According to the family, the nurse mistakenly gave Samuel ten times the prescribed dose of morphine which resulted in his death a month later. The family went on to testify that the nurse had a history of misusing medications and, after waiting two years for a decision, the S.C. Board of Nursing (SCBON) placed her on probation for a year, issued fines and required her to take classes. Representatives from the South Carolina Nurses Association as well as the South Carolina Hospital Association testified in the hearing. Following the testimony, the bill was recommended for review by the Senate Medical Affairs Committee.

We brought this bill to your attention during the 2015 SCAPAN Spring Conference. Many of you were outraged and wrote to your representatives. I'd like to update you on what has happened to the bill since then.

In January 2016, the Senate Panel amended the newly titled Nurse Discipline Act (S. 371). The proposed legislation would revoke a nurse's license if it was found that the nurse misread a physician's order and overmedicated or under-medicated a patient resulting in the patient's death (NEW). The bill now required the SCBON to "consider revocation" of the nurse's license and provide a disciplinary process that would allow involvement of the deceased patient's family members. The amendment also allowed the SCBON to place the licensee on temporary suspension pending a final determination by the Board, but did not require the licensee be suspended. The amendment was approved by the subcommittee and advanced to the full Senate Medical Affairs Committee.

In February 2016, The Nurse Discipline Act (S.371), now more commonly known as "Samuel's Law," was amended and advanced favorably by the Senate Medical Affairs Committee. Initially, the legislation provided for the revocation of a nurse's license if it was found that the nurse overmedicated or under-medicated a patient due to misreading an order which resulted in a patient's death.

It was further amended to only suspend the nurse's license temporarily while under investigation and provide for an avenue for affected parties to participate in the disciplinary process. Senator Brad Hutto (D-Orangeburg), as well as other senators, opposed "Samuel's Law" presenting a possible stall on the senator floor.

In June 2016, Rep. Smith (R-Sumter) moved to recommit "Samuel's Law" to the House 3M Committee. The motion passed. The commitment removed the bill from the House Calendar, preventing concurrence with the Senate's amendments before the adjournment of the regular session, and essentially killed S. 371 as it was written.

In addition, H.4327, the Quality Hospice Programs Act, was renamed "Samuel's Law" in honor of Samuel Cutliff. The Act was amended to include a task force to study potential geographic limitations on the region for hospice services and to review patient safety and quality in hospice programs in South Carolina. There were no punitive implications for nurses in this legislation and no elements of the bill that pertain to licensing. The task force will include eight hospice members and two at-large members to look at the issue. That bill, as amended, passed the Senate and House just before adjournment June 2, 2016.

"PeriAnesthesia nurses, individually and collectively, serve as advocates for the nursing profession, PeriAnesthesia nursing practice, patients and their families" (ASPAN, 2015-2017, p. 12). Part of our professional responsibility is to be aware of current political events that involve healthcare policy and our profession. This bill would have had a huge impact on our profession. Thank you to all who contacted your State representatives.

ASPAN'S 35th National Conference – Personal ExperiencePam Hart, BSN, RN, CPAN

This was the second ASPAN National Conference that I have been fortunate enough to attend. Making this year's trip even better, I was generously awarded a $1000 stipend from SCAPAN toward my expenses for the Philadelphia conference. A gathering of nearly 2000 PeriAnesthesia nurses in any one place is bound to be fun as well as inspiring; and Philadelphia did not disappoint on either count.

Learning the latest and best practices from knowledgeable speakers, or simply validating one's own knowledge is so rewarding. Touring the posters and reading about the research done by PeriAnesthesia nurses all across this country is definitely thought-provoking and educational. Seeing the latest, greatest products as showcased by all the product reps is another interesting educational opportunity offered. Bidding on (and winning) a unique item in the silent auction is just a fun bonus! And last, but not least-spending time with old friends as well as making new ones is always very special as well.

From walking and touring the streets and sights of downtown Philadelphia, to enjoying my first -ever authentic Philly cheesesteak sandwich, it was all so very memorable and fun. Truly, we loved Philly and Philly loved us back!

My coming back with a greater inspiration to practice PeriAnesthesia nursing with a passion and the desire for excellence each and every day, confirms the value of attendance at such events. Thank you SCAPAN for this amazing gift and opportunity.

Questions you may have regarding SCAPAN Membership

What is the difference between ASPAN and SCAPAN membership?

The American Society of PeriAnesthesia Nurses (ASPAN - (www.aspan.org)) is our national professional specialty nursing organization representing the interests of more than 55,000 nurses practicing in all phases of preanesthesia and postanesthesia care, ambulatory surgery, and pain management (at the national level). Once you become a member of ASPAN you are then eligible to become a member of South Carolina Association of PeriAnesthesia Nurses (SCAPAN). When completing your ASPAN membership application choose SCAPAN as your state component to join our South Carolina Component.

What is done to increase SCAPAN membership?

A few things our Membership Team does:

- Distribute membership flyers and information at State and local conferences
- All new members are sent a "Welcome" letter along with some basic SCAPAN information
- Purchase and distribute certification pins to all newly certified nurses in South Carolina congratulating them on their personal achievement
- Send letters to all certified nurses who are non-members, encouraging them to join ASPAN/SCAPAN, prior to their recertification
- Send renewal reminders to current members as their renewal month approaches
- Collaborate with our ABPANC regional representative encouraging PeriAnesthesia nurse certification

How may I help increase our membership?

As a member in good standing you are eligible to be a part of the membership/marketing committee. Please contact Jeanie Roberts-Baxley at tatertot37@comcast.net or Donnalea Shearer at Donnalea.Shearer@PalmettoHealth.org. It is important that as a SCAPAN member you inform fellow nurses regarding the benefits of being a part of the organization. The core value of ASPAN is "to advance the unique specialty of perianesthesia nursing". Let's get the word out!

UTILIZATION OF CRITICAL THINKING FOR THE PERIANESTHESIA NURSE

Dianne Jackson BSN, RN, CAPA

The term critical thinking is not new. In fact, according to Kearney-Nunnery (2012) it has been around since the time of Socrates in ancient Greece (p. 127). When applied to the clinical setting Alfaro-LeFevre (2009) likens it to an umbrella under which there is reasoning exercised both outside and inside the clinical setting (p. 15). To further understand this concept, particularly in relationship to the nursing process, outside reasoning includes not only what is learned in the classroom, but also how one lives their daily life in response to stress and how they manage their time in general. Reasoning inside the clinical setting takes place within the structure of the nursing process, (assessment, diagnosis, outcome identification, planning, implementation and evaluation). This standardized methodology of administering care guides nurses to think more critically and thereby provides the most competent care possible (Alfaro-LeFevre, 2009, p. 15). When the nurse takes their knowledge and experience and applies it to a challenging clinical event, he or she learns to become a more critical thinker (Kearney-Nunnery, 2012, p. 129).

When I began my nursing career several years ago I began with a certain degree of knowledge, but I had very little experience in the application of that knowledge to particular patient situations. My confidence began to grow as I increasingly utilized the critical thinking process, though I didn't necessarily think of it in those terms at that time (Kearney-Nunnery, 2012, p. 132).

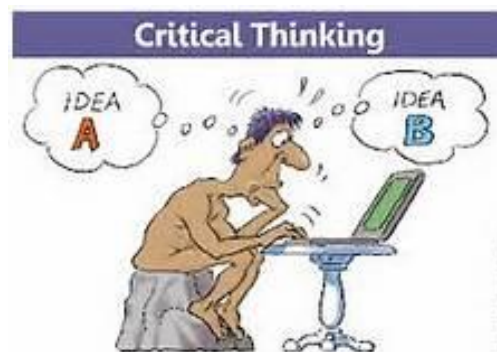

For example, when dealing with a patient's post-operative pain, early in my career I would typically administer prescribed pain medication based primarily upon the patient's expressed level of discomfort. Today, I would take into consideration several other factors in determining if additional pain medication would be appropriate, factors such as; the precise type, intensity and location of the pain, the patient's prior response to specific medications given, if the pain is a breakthrough pain, the age of the patient, how much medication had already been administered and when, if they have a history of sleep apnea, and also to be considered are possible interventions, aside from medication that might help relieve their pain.

Reflecting on previous reasoning and its result and then looking for areas where improvement could be made helps to capitalize on what can be learned from our own experiences (Alfaro-LeFevre, 2009, p. 16). By utilizing this practice I have continued to develop my critical thinking skills (Kearney-Nunnery, 2012, p. 129).

For instance, as I gather a patient's health history in preparation for a surgical procedure there is a need to be proactive and anticipate how the patient's medical history may affect the anesthesia and surgery plans (Alfaro-LeFevre, 2009, p. 16). Recently a patient was scheduled for a hernia repair. After obtaining records from a cardiology visit, it was discovered that the patient had been instructed to schedule a follow up stress test. This had not been done however, and after notifying the surgeon and anesthesiologist of this the surgery was postponed until the stress test had been completed. Critical thinking had averted unnecessary, and possibly life threatening risk to the patient.

The critical thinking process also involves thinking on one's feet as a clinical event is unfolding (Alfaro-LeFevre, 2009). This is seen in another recent case which involved a patient who had arrived for foot surgery. Due to a history of hypertension, an EKG was performed. A comparison between this EKG and one that had been done 18 months earlier revealed significant T wave changes. After investigating further, it was discovered that he had been experiencing intermittent "pressing" epigastric pain for the past few days. Instead of surgery, he received a cardiology consult and was admitted to the heart hospital for further study and observation.

Although these examples represent only a very minute sampling of what transpires in the life of a bedside nurse, they demonstrate the absolute necessity for a prudent nurse to constantly practice critical thinking in order to provide the best of quality care (Kearney-Nunnery, 2012, p. 129).

MORE ASPAN NATIONAL CONFERENCE EXPERIENCES

Regarding my very favorable and positive experience in attending the National Conference this year; it was just wonderful and I thoroughly enjoyed the experience. Once again, the ability to network with others nurses from all over the United States was phenomenal.

Thanks so very much for the opportunity to represent SCAPAN at our RA session; it was outstanding and so very informative. Marilyn Jefferies, RN

I attended ASPAN's National Conference in Philadelphia PA. I had an amazing time learning new and improved ways that PeriAnesthesia nurses are enhancing their practice. There were multiple sessions to attend from a variety of subjects. I was able to network with other nurses and ask questions on "hot topics" within our departments. Monday started off with a wonderful inspirational speech from Rich Bluni that set the tone for the entire conference and reminded each of us why we became a nurse. This was my first time attending and I could not believe how nice everyone was and how willing they were to share their knowledge or new processes even when those changes didn't succeed. There were two sessions that were presentations of celebrating successful practices in which we learned about changes that were made at other facilities. It was great to see how some perioperative areas changed visitation, staffing, and monitoring of their patients. The most interesting thing that I learned was about Enhanced Recovery After Surgery (ERAS). This involves a multimodal approach to patient care to allow for quicker recovery times after major surgeries including total joints. One facility was discharging patients the same day from outpatient surgery that had undergone total knee replacements and total shoulder replacements. I absolutely enjoyed the poster gallery. Many nurses or groups of nurses shared information and studies that have done that included the benefits of having a nurse navigator and how that improved Press Ganey scores as well as multiple posters regarding STOP-BANG assessments and end tidal CO2 monitoring. Along with all the educational offerings there was fun activities as well. The first night is Component Night that allows you to dance and chat with other nurses. Each component had something to raffle off and it was a great way for components to raise money. The CPAN/CAPA luncheon was amazing to see how many nurses are certified and take pride in their work. I was able to return home to share a lot of knowledge with other nurses and management teams. I also had a restored passion for my job. Kara Johnson, RN, BSN
