

WILDFLOWERS
(Wexler)

I saw you hidden in heather across blue slate skies
You always change with the weather but your colours mesmerise
I saw you laughing in moonlight tossing daisy chains
You always fade into twilight but your scent remains

Off in the distance your eyes cast resistance birds sound their warnings
I move closer, I reach out but...

Wildflowers bend in the wind to their own blue skies within Wildflowers aren't for the asking no matter how their beauty woos you in
I know I surely could hold you in a moments whim, take care, Wildflowers bend in the wind to their own dark skies within

I caught you whispering violets
Bedding butterflies
They always fall sweet Juliets
Before they realise

Off in the distance your eyes caste resistance
birds sound their warnings
I move closer, I reach out but...

Wildflowers bend in the wind to their own blue skies within Wildflowers aren't for the asking no matter how their beauty woos you in
I know I surely could hold you in a moments whim, take care,
Wildflowers bend in the wind to their own dark skies within

And all your maids in a row swirl within your undertow
I must try to swim a ground before beneath you I drown

Wildflowers....
