

You've seen the news. You know about the ivory wars.
Now, discover why there is

New Hope for Elephants

Join our Wildlife Crime and Consumer Awareness Program Director, Kelvin Alie, for an informal and inspirational discussion of how we can save these and other threatened animals.

NEW DATE SCHEDULED FOR:

Saturday, December 1, 2012

4:00 - 6:00 pm

Kelvin will welcome an open discussion about our shared vision:
A global community in which animals are protected and respected.

Hosted by Epic Road at Mark Lakin Photography Gallery
750 Greenwich Street, New York, NY (corner of W 11th St.)

Coffee and pastries will be served.

 Kindly RSVP to Britt Beedenbender at IFAW by November 28, 2012 *****
(508) 744-2098 or bbeedenbender@ifaw.org

Kelvin Alie

Director Wildlife Crime and Consumer Awareness Program

A conservation professional for over 15 years, Kelvin has been leading the global expansion of IFAW's Prevention of Wildlife Trafficking project, which has provided more than 40 trainings in 15 countries. Kelvin works in close cooperation with INTERPOL's Environmental Crime Program, overseeing a joint partnership initiative involving wildlife law enforcement trainings and operations across Africa and Asia.