If you go to meetings or appointments to stand up for a friend or relative with disability and feel intimidated, anxious, outnumbered, powerless or not heard by professionals, then there are some simple strategies you can use to achieve good outcomes.

If you would like to feel comfortable and confident going to meetings, know you're going to be heard and that there will be fair outcomes, then this session is for you.

We will explore the attitudes and strategies we need to stand up for someone without getting worn down and frustrated ourselves.
