

Skins jazz it up

By KRISTEN PUTCH

There's nothing wrong with a little jazz. Especially if it's yours.

Because while they may appear a rather ordinary ingredient, onions, when used in the right way, can jazz up your cooking.

It's all about the onion. Whether you use whole onions, chopped onions, onion powder or onion oil, you can jazz up your cooking.

Onions are a staple in many cuisines. They are used in soups, stews, and salads. They are also used as a garnish for many dishes.

Onions are also used in many different ways. They can be roasted, sautéed, or even used as a base for a sauce.

Ditch the brown bag, go stainless

By KRISTEN PUTCH

It's a common sight: a brown paper bag filled with produce. But what if you could ditch the brown bag and go stainless?

There's nothing wrong with a little jazz. Especially if it's yours. Onions are a staple in many cuisines. They are used in soups, stews, and salads. They are also used as a garnish for many dishes.

Stainless, an alternative produce bag for larger bags, along with Carry Bags, is shown here.

Not your average fried 'chicken'

By ANDREW SHAW

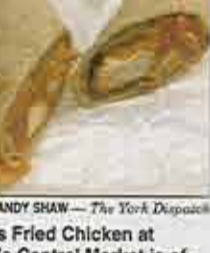

A vegan or vegetarian in York County probably knows every local restaurant that has something animal product-free on the menu. You have to. There's not an app for that — yet.

York, is doing something you don't see a place that specializes in fried meat do often. They are catering to the needs of people who wouldn't touch fried meat with a ten-foot kabob.

Bair's Fried Chicken at York's Central Market is offering some new vegan options, such as the spicy 'chicken' wrap, shown above.
