

“What if I lose coverage?” What YOUNGER WOMEN Have to Lose

President-elect Trump has pledged to repeal the Affordable Care Act (ACA) with the help of a willing majority in Congress. Every single American will be affected if this happens -- including anyone who gets health insurance from their job.

Here’s what younger women (age 18-44) have to lose:

- Free preventive services such as birth control, screenings for STIs, and Pap tests.
- Being able to stay on your parents’ health plan until age 26.
- Guaranteed coverage of maternity care, so you can afford to have a baby, a free support for breastfeeding.
- Being able to buy health insurance you can actually afford on your own through the ACA marketplaces, if you don’t get coverage through a job.
- Not being charged more just because you’re a woman. Without the ACA, insurance companies can go back to charging women up to 30% more than men!
- Not being rejected by insurance companies for getting sick. Without the ACA, insurance companies can go back to denying coverage for women who have breast cancer or other serious illnesses.
- Free or low-cost health coverage through expanded Medicaid programs for low income people.
