

Kintampo Project doubles intake of new students after high demand

The popularity of the Project's Community Mental Health Officer (CMHO) course has exceeded our expectations.

We had planned to take on 50 new students each year, but we have had to increase this to 100 following an overwhelming number of talented applicants. In total, over 600 people approached us this year. This is wonderful as it shows the interest in mental health services and that people really see a career in mental health as a positive thing.

The Kintampo Project has already trained around 180 CMHOs and this is our third intake. We now have qualified mental health workers in all of Ghana's 10 regions.

We welcome our new students and wish them all the best in their studies!
