Liturgical Reflection

Sixth Sunday of Easter

FIRST READING: Acts 10:25-26, 34-35, 44-48

In entering the home of the Gentile Cornelius, Peter takes a radical step for a Jew. In a vision, Peter has come to an awareness of God's inclusive nature and boldly states that "God shows no partiality. Rather in every nation, whoever fears him and acts uprightly, is acceptable to him." Peter is interrupted by the Spirit who proceeds to descend upon all. Jewish believers are astounded that the Spirit is gifting both Gentiles and Jews. Peter responds by saying that if Gentiles are acceptable to the Lord, then who are we to stand in God's path. He orders Cornelius and his entire household to be baptized. Often we too need to scrutinize our beliefs and actions to make certain that we are not standing in God's path.

RESPONSORIAL PSALM: 98

Psalm 98 acclaims the Lord for making his salvation known. As Easter people, for us there is nothing like God's saving power in Christ Jesus, nor will there ever be. This power extends to the ends of the earth. Through our witness, we invite others into the gift of God's salvation.

SECOND READING: 1 John 4:7-10

We are exhorted to love one another because love is of God, and whoever loves knows God and is begotten by God. God is love. That love is clearly manifested by the Father taking the initiative in sending Jesus to show love's depth, even to the point of being willing to die for another. Whoever does not love, does not know God. Easter Time invites us to reflect on how we practically and realistically demonstrate our love of God.

GOSPEL: John 15:9-17

In his farewell address to his disciples, Jesus exhorts them to love one another as he has loved them. The depth of love is the willingness to die for the other. Jesus has chosen them, revealed all that the Father commanded him, and promises to love them and remain in them. All he asks in return is to remain in him by loving one another. Intimacy with God rests on our willingness to believe in and imitate Jesus in loving one another even unto death. Our communities would certainly be different if we all took this message to heart in all our dealings and encounters.

ABOUT THIS SUNDAY

We continue during these 50 days of Easter Time with heartfelt devotion in honor of the risen Lord. On this final Sunday before the Ascension, we are invited to remember that the miracle of the Resurrection is ultimately one of love – a love that is so powerful that all forms of death are defeated by it.

SAMARITAN HOUSE - 20 YEARS OF SERVICE

"Before and above all things, care must be taken of the sick, that they be served in very truth as Christ is served." Samaritan House is celebrating 20 years of service to our community, helping guests die with dignity and loving care. We have served over 100 souls in our 20 years, on an all volunteer basis. Currently we are seeking to increase our volunteer base. Our volunteers, some of whom started this ministry, have aged out, become ill, are caring for family members or have moved away. When a guest is in residence, there are 35 shifts per week to fill. Daytime shifts are 4 hours and nights are 8 hours. We ask for family involvement but often they are unable to do so. No medical experience is required to volunteer, just the desire to lovingly serve each guest. Volunteers work with an experienced volunteer until they feel comfortable. End of life care is about safety, comfort and caring. The ability of Samaritan House to accept guests is totally dependent on our volunteers. We URGENTLY need to recruit new volunteers! Please visit the Samaritan House website at www.samaritanhouseofwellsboro.com to review our history and comments from volunteers. An application can be downloaded and emailed to dstager@ptd.net or dropped off at the Rectory. Please call Julie Stager (570-376-2424) or Laurie Coffee (570-549-2210) if you have any questions. Thank you for your consideration of this important ministry!

The holiness to which the Lord calls you grows through small gestures in everyday life. Pope Francis

Pro Life News

PRIESTS FOR LIFE

The readings today teach us that God's love for us takes precedence over our love for him, and that his choice of us takes precedence over our choice for him. "It was not you who chose me, but I who chose you" (Gospel). In a society that places such a high value on "freedom of choice," this truth is especially important. It is God's choice of a human life that gives it value, not our choice. It is God's decision to entrust us to the care of each other that creates the responsibilities we have toward human life, not the choice we make to be responsible for them. If our responsibility to love and care for human life, starting with our own children (born and unborn) is rooted in God's eternal choice and his decision to love us (and those children), then we do not have the moral right to reject that responsibility, love, and life. The command given to us to love, therefore, is a command both to receive and give the kind of love God shows. "Love one another as I love you" (Gospel). We are to lay down our lives for one another, which is exactly the opposite of laying down others' lives for ourselves (as so many do by abortion and other forms of violence). "Praying means being with God, experiencing God, loving God." Pope Francis

That's The Way It Is!

Seven German bishops have asked Pope Francis to allow the Protestant spouses married to a Catholic to receive communion in the Catholic Church. The Vatican has rejected this proposal. Now the news is reporting that the pope and German bishops will discuss the proposal further. The whole discussion begs the question: What is the big deal? Catholics and Protestants celebrate a common baptism, we worship the same God, our beliefs are similar, we work together on many charitable projects. Why can't the Catholic Church just allow Protestants to receive communion in their churches? Why Can't the Catholic Church allow Catholics to receive communion in Protestant churches?"

I need to make one thing clear: the reason Catholics and Protestants do not share intercommunion has nothing whatever to do with Catholics thinking they are better than Protestants. Catholics recognize Protestants as their fellow brothers and sisters in Christ. We indeed share many common beliefs. We share a common baptism; we have the same God and Father, the same Lord Jesus Christ, the same care and concern for each other and the same care and concern for the poor. For this reason there are many things we can do together. Unfortunately communion is not one of those things.

For as much as Catholics and Protestants hold in common, there are many things on which we are nonetheless divided. We cannot ignore these divisions; we cannot pretend they do not exist. These divisions are not just over matters of taste, theological emphasis or otherwise insubstantial things. These divisions are over what both Catholics and Protestants would consider substantial things, not the least of which is the meaning of communion itself. It is due to these divisions that we do not have intercommunion.

In order for Protestants and Catholics to have intercommunion, Protestants, would, in essence, have to give up the unique beliefs that set them apart as Protestants. In order for Catholics to receive communion in a Protestant church, they would have to give up the unique beliefs that set them apart as Catholics. What are some things that Catholics and Protestants substantially disagree on? The disagreements between Protestants and Catholics can be reduced to two things: 1) The question of authority and how it works in the Church, and 2) The question of salvation and how the Grace of God works to save us.

The disagreement on the question of authority in the Church is why Protestant churches tend towards a democracy while Catholic churches do not. It is why Protestants do not believe unity with the pope and bishops is an essential component of what it means to be the Church. It is why Protestants place so much emphasis on the Scriptures and demand scriptural proof for all teachings of the Church. For Protestants, the Scriptures are the only mechanism that speak with the authority of God in the Church today. Protestants, therefore tend to draw a dichotomy between Scripture, the leaders of the Church and Tradition. Catholics do not make such a dichotomy. Catholics believe Scripture, the leaders of the Church who are the pope and bishops and Tradition all manifest and speak with the authority of God—but in their own unique ways.

The disagreement on the question salvation is why Protestants reject the Priesthood as Catholics understand it and the need for sacraments. It is why Protestants believe we are saved by Faith alone and that human works play little to no role in our salvation. It is why Protestants believe that praying to Mary and the saints is idolatrous and sinful. It is why Protestants do not have the spiritual disciplines of Catholics such as fasting and abstinence during Lent, indulgences, novenas, etc. Protestants believe we are saved by Christ alone through Grace alone by Faith alone. Catholics believe we are saved by Christ alone through Grace alone by Faith and works. For Catholics, Faith works in love. For Catholics, works done in Grace are saving. To some, this may sound like a small matter. Trust me, it is not. It is a huge, huge deal.

The point is that these disagreements are why Protestants and Catholics cannot share inter-denominational communion. These differences and disagreements must be overcome in order for us to have inter-denominational communion. In danger of death, a baptized Protestant who can profess the Catholic belief in the Eucharist may receive communion. However, in ordinary circumstances we cannot share communion unless or until our differences are overcome. In ordinary circumstances, professing Catholic belief in the Eucharist is a start but it is not sufficient because we are divided on more than just the nature of communion.

I will end on this note: to any Protestant who wants to receive communion in the Catholic Church because you profess the Catholic Faith regarding the Eucharist, why don't you consider becoming Catholic? On the other hand, to any Catholic who does not profess the Catholic Faith regarding the Eucharist; that is, you reject Transubstantiation, why exactly are you Catholic? In my mind, without the Eucharist there is little point to being Catholic. The Eucharist is why I am Catholic and it is the only thing that keeps me Catholic. That's the way it is! The Reverend David W. Bechtel

We are reaching to you, Lord, to hold us, comfort us, and heal us. Lord, this we know, you are faithful in your love for us today and forever. You are with us, and we are with you. Amen.*
