Liturgical Reflection

14th Sunday in Ordinary Time

FIRST READING: Ezekiel 2:2-5

God's communication may sometimes be more realistic than we would hope. Here, Ezekiel is called to be a prophet and warned that he will likely not find success. God calls Ezekiel to a most difficult task: to prophesy to a people who have long ignored God's word, rebelled against a divine plan, even attempted to kill prophets whose message they did not wish to hear. We might question the value of taking on such a mission. God's answer is simply, "They shall know that prophet has been among them." No one who has heard a prophet can claim innocence through ignorance.

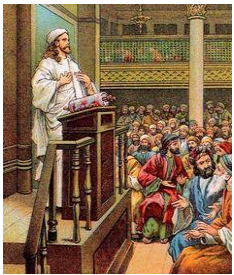

RESPONSORIAL PSALM: Psalm 123

The psalm begins with an individual praying to the Lord in heaven and then shifts to the plural, where we focus our eyes on the Lord. In order for the prophet Ezekiel to fulfill his mission, his eyes had to be locked on the Lord, lest the rebellious house of Israel frustrate him so he resign his prophetic work. Why are our eyes focused on the Lord? We, like Israel, implore the Lord for mercy, for we have sinned.

SECOND READING: 2 Corinthians 12:7-10

Like Ezekiel and Jesus, Paul must carry out the work he believes God has given him in the face of resistance, threats, and difficulties. He even acknowledges that some struggles might have a divine cause, illustrating that it is God's power, not his own, that empowers his ministry. Paul is offering us an example of selfless discipleship. He challenges us to accept our weakness as the religious and emotional space where we can best encounter God working in and through us. Paul's final statement, "when I am weak, then I am strong," can meet with much resistance in an age that glorifies personal strength and accomplishment – as much resistance as Ezekiel, Paul, and Jesus faced in their times.

GOSPEL: Mark 6:1-6

Today's Gospel follows immediately from last Sunday's account of Jesus raising the synagogue official's daughter. Here the people continue to be astonished at him: he not only works wonders – often associated with prophets – but he teaches in the synagogue. Jesus clearly indicates that he sees himself as one who speaks for God. He seems all too aware of how his people rejected previous spokesmen for God. The people's resistance to Jesus indicates lack of faith, and so Jesus cannot perform further mighty deeds. Rather than reassess their way of thinking, they convinced themselves that Jesus, coming from a simple family known to all of them, couldn't possibly have a new message worthy of their attention. Are we ready to hear a divine message from a simple source?

That's The Way It Is!

Justice Kennedy is retiring from the SCOTUS at the end of July. His retirement from the SCOTUS is a huge deal; it is a game changer. This is because Justice Kennedy is the swing vote on the court. Most, I think, would consider Justice Kennedy to be center right. Justice Kennedy, however, was never reliably conservative. When it came to important social issues like gay marriage or abortion Kennedy tended to align with the liberal wing of the court. Often times this gave the liberal wing of the court the 5-4 majority needed to hand down a definitive ruling on the issue in question. Because Kennedy was the swing vote, because he was not reliably conservative, many fear that Kennedy's replacement could potentially be a game changer when it comes to Roe v. Wade. If President Trump nominates a justice unsympathetic to Roe that could possibly give the court the 5-4 majority to overturn Roe.

It would be a dream come true for me and many who are pro-life to see Roe overturned. We would see that as a great victory for life, love and the rights of the unborn. At the same time, I am always the eternal pessimist. My father has a saying that his father taught him and he taught me: "Be a pessimist; the optimism will take care of itself." I think a direct and outright overturning of Roe is highly improbable. For starters, in order to overturn Roe, the other four conservative justices on the SCOTUS would have to all be on board with that. No one really knows if they are on board with that. The media speculates that they might be on board but media speculation and reality are two different things. I think it more likely what would happen is that the scope of Roe would be narrowed. In other words, abortion would still be legal, but as states begin to pass laws restricting abortion, the court would uphold them.

What would happen if Roe v. Wade was directly overturned by the SCOTUS? Would women go to jail as some senators are claiming? Would police be showing up at the homes of women who have had miscarriages to investigate the "suspicious" nature of the miscarriage? In a word: NO. First, no one who is pro-life believes that police should investigate miscarriages or otherwise raid the homes of women to look for evidence of abortion. Second: if Roe were overturned all that would happen is that the legality or illegality of abortion would be taken out of the hands of the judicial system, where it never should have been anyway, and placed back in the hands of the American people. States would once again be free to legislate on abortion. If this is the case, I would expect more liberal states to allow for legalized abortion, while more conservative states would restrict abortion. Even in states that would restrict abortion; I still foresee abortion being legal in cases of rape, incest or where the mother's life is in danger. I suppose the federal government could also potentially pass laws restricting abortion, but there also I see abortion being legal in cases of rape and incest. Even if President Trump succeeds in getting a hard right justice confirmed, I think it highly unlikely that we will see a direct reversal of Roe v. Wade. Not that I am not hoping for that to happen, I just don't see it happening.

Normal Leah McCorvey Nelson was the "Roe" in "Roe v. Wade." She had sought an abortion but could not get one on Texas. Lawyers were looking for pregnant women who wanted an abortion to challenge the Texas laws banning abortion. Nelson was referred to these lawyers and was the plaintiff in Roe v. Wade. She did actually give birth to her child while her case made it through the legal system and her child was adopted. On January 22, 1972 the SCOTUS handed down one of the worst decisions in its history ultimately legalizing abortion. Later on Nelson became pro-life and also a pro-life activist. Here is an account of her conversion to the pro-life cause:

"I was sitting in O.R.'s offices when I noticed a fetal development poster. The progression was so obvious, the eyes were so sweet. It hurt my heart, just looking at them. I ran outside and finally, it dawned on me. 'Norma', I said to myself, 'They're right'. I had worked with pregnant women for years. I had been through three pregnancies and deliveries myself. I should have known. Yet something in that poster made me lose my breath. I kept seeing the picture of that tiny, 10-week-old embryo, and I said to myself, that's a baby! It's as if blinders just fell off my eyes and I suddenly understood the truth—that's a baby!

I felt crushed under the truth of this realization. I had to face up to the awful reality. Abortion wasn't about 'products of conception'. It wasn't about 'missed periods'. It was about children being killed in their mother's wombs. All those years I was wrong. Signing that affidavit, I was wrong. Working in an abortion clinic, I was wrong. No more of this first trimester, second trimester, third trimester stuff. Abortion—at any point—was wrong. It was so clear. Painfully clear" (Wikipedia- footnote 3, McCorvey, Norma & Thomas, Gary (January 1998). "Roe v. McCorvey" Leadership U. Retrieved February 18, 2017.)

Nelson, by the way, also converted to Catholicism. She was received into the Faith in 1998 by Father Frank Pavone. Prior to her conversion she was a practicing lesbian. After her conversion she gave up the homosexual lifestyle. She protested President Obama's speech at Notre Dame University in 2009. President Obama is pro-abortion and should not have been invited to speak at a Catholic University. Nelson also was arrested while protesting Sonya Sotomayor's confirmation hearings to the SCOTUS. She and another protestor interrupted Senator Al Franklin's opening remarks.

That's the way it is,

The Reverend David W. Bechtel
Pastor

News from the Vatican

YOU HAVE SOME PROBLEM?
SOME SIN? ENTRUST IT TO JESUS WITH FAITH. HE WILL MAKE YOU NEW

Pope Francis stressed this during his Angelus address as he recalled that the Sunday's Gospel according to St.

Mark presents two interlocking stories, with a single center: faith; and show Jesus as the source of life, as the One Who gives back life to those who trust Him fully.

The two protagonists, the father of the girl who was dead, and Jesus brought back to life, and the sick woman who had suffered bleeding for years, and Jesus healed, are not disciples of Jesus and yet they are restored because of their faith.

"They have faith in that Man. From this, we understand that everyone is admitted on the path of the Lord: no one should feel like an intruder, an abusive person or someone who has no right."

This possibility is valid for everyone – No one excluded

"To have access to His heart, to the heart of Jesus," Francis reminded, "there is only this required: to feel in need of healing and to entrust himself to Him."

"I ask you," the Pope continued: "Does each one of you feel in need of healing? Of something, some sin, some problem? And, if you hear this, do you have faith in Jesus? These are the two requirements to be healed, to have access to His heart: to feel oneself in need of healing and to entrust oneself to Him."

Jesus, he noted, goes to discover these people in the crowd and takes them away from anonymity, freeing them from the fear of living.

"He does it with a look and with a word that puts them on the road again after so much suffering and humiliation. We too are called to learn and to imitate these words that liberate, and these looks ..."

In this Gospel reading, the Pope explained, the themes of faith and new life, that Jesus came to offer everyone, are intertwined. He recalled how when Jesus enters the house where the girl lies dead, and says: "The child is not dead, she is asleep" (v. 39).

"Jesus is the Lord, and before Him, physical death is like a sleep: there is no reason to despair. Another 'death' is to be afraid of: that of the heart hardened by evil! Of that, yes, we must be afraid!"

"When we feel that our hearts are hardened, and, I allow myself to say 'the mummified heart,' we must be afraid of this. This is the death of the heart."

Never the Last Word

Even sin, even 'the mummified heart'—Pope Francis stressed— for Jesus, is never the last word, because He has brought us the infinite mercy of the Father.

"Even if we fell down, His soft and strong voice reaches us: 'I tell you: get up!'" It is beautiful to hear that word of Jesus addressed to each one of us: "I tell you: stand up! Go. Stand up, be brave, get up!"

Jesus, he reminded, restores the girl to life and gives life back to the healed woman, giving life to and strengthening the faith of both.

Pope Francis concluded, praying: "We ask the Virgin Mary to accompany our journey of faith and concrete love, especially towards those in need. And let us invoke her maternal intercession for our brothers who suffer in body and spirit."

PRIESTS FOR LIFE

The readings today invite us to reflect on what it means to be a prophet, and how we can be "content with...insults...and persecutions." At our baptism, we were declared to be "Priest, Prophet, and King," like the Lord Jesus into whose Body and mission we were baptized. A "prophet" does not primarily tell the future; rather, a prophet tells the present, declaring to the people what the Word of the Lord says about our current circumstances, culture, and lifestyle. The prophet declares the next good step for God's people to take on their constant road of repentance and growth in holiness. As the People of Life living amidst a culture of death, we are all prophets regarding the sanctity of life; we are prophets who declare that the only appropriate response to life at all stages, especially when most vulnerable, is a generous and loving "Yes." We are prophets as we teach our children about the dignity of life; we are prophets when we share the pro-life message with friends and co-workers, with the community through letters to the local papers or over the internet. We are prophets when we enter the voting booth, as we have the obligation to do at each election, and elect candidates who are committed to protect the unborn.

Because a prophetic stance calls us to change and to repent of sin, the prophet will often be rejected. The readings tell us that this is par for the course. It is easy to think that the rejection or persecution that accompany the prophetic role mean we need to go back to the drawing board or perhaps hire a public relations firm to refine our message. But in fact it doesn't mean that at all. We are called to be faithful, as Mother Teresa noted, whether or not we are successful. "They shall know that a prophet has been among them." www.priestsforlife.org

Eternal Rest Grant Unto Them, O Lord and Let the Perpetual Light Shine Upon Them.

Lord, this we know, no matter how difficult life may be at this time, we know you will not stop loving us and will always hold us in the palm of your hand. We are reaching to you, Lord, to hold us, comfort us, and heal us. Lord, this we know, you are faithful in your love for us today and forever. You are with us, and we are with you. Amen.
