Axys License Optimization & Tracking (aLOT)

Does your firm have enough Axys licenses, or too many?

Validate your ongoing Axys user requirements.

aLOT was designed to help Axys users validate their Axys licensing requirements and make better use of the licenses they maintain with Advent Software. By default, Axys license usage is difficult to gauge, as Advent's prepackaged tool to determine license usage falls short of the task. Through the use of aLOT, Axys users are able to better understand who is in Axys at any given time and optimize the usage of their Axys licenses.

Are your Axys users idle?

aLOT places Axys users in three fundamental groups, and rule-based logic is used to optimize license usage. The first group, reserved for system use, is never bothered about licensing. The second group - typically the investment operations group - is warned when they are idling in Axys, but never kicked out without their consent. The third group, likely your sales team and executives, are warned when they are idling in Axys and given sufficient time to respond; if they do not respond in the time allotted, their Axys sessions are terminated, freeing up valuable licenses for other users at your office.

aLOT clearly indicates Axys usage.

The aLOT program loads a traffic light icon on the taskbar to provide up-to-date information on how many of your Axys licenses are available. A green light indicates that more than half of your licenses are available; a yellow light tells you that less than half of your licenses are available; and red light means that no licenses are available. Equipped with this info, your users know whether they are preventing other users from getting into Axys.

At any time, Axys users can click on the aLOT task bar icon to see who else is using Axys. Using aLOT at your firm enables your users to cooperatively share the licenses you have without needing to communicate directly about whether they are using Axys; however, if they still need to talk about licenses, they can clearly see who is using Axys and contact those users directly.

aLOT is an instrumental tool for managers that can be used to easily validate whether your firm has enough licenses, or too many. Stop paying more than you should for Axys licenses.
