

ENHANCING THE EFFECTIVENESS OF PARK & RECREATION PROFESSIONALS

In its 44th year in 2018, the Leisure Development Course continues to provide innovative professional development for park, recreation, culture and community development personnel. As one of Canada's premiere education opportunities presented by a faculty from varied professions including business, public administration, recreation and parks, and academia; students receive timely information and modern tools to enhance their personal and professional growth and, in turn, their respective community and/or agency. Successful graduates also have the option to apply for post-secondary credits through the Recreation Studies Department at Langara College, Vancouver, B.C.

Comments from a few recent Leisure Development Course participants:

"The caliber of instruction offered during Leisure Development Course is exceptional and the networking opportunity invaluable. The program topics offered a direct application to my daily department responsibilities and although it was an intense four days of learning it was worth every moment."

"The LDC program for me was an invaluable asset. The knowledge I gained in the three years has helped me to develop skills that will continue to help me grow throughout my career. It provided great networking opportunities with other municipalities, and many valuable tools to utilize in my own department."

"This has been an awesome and wonderful experience. The classmates, instructors, accommodations and organizers were great. The diversity of the Leisure Development Course is an invaluable asset as practices, views, philosophies, differences, and commonalities are all brought together for the improvement of all the students."

"My favorite facet of the Course is the ability to network and share with some incredible people. The Leisure Development Course is definitely an exceptional learning opportunity."
