BACK TO THE FUTURE

Horton Herrin & Lynn Petty (Updated Article from The Plastic Whittler from March of 2014)

Just a few days after our last meeting where Ed gave us the demo on Roy's Wash Horton Herrin ran into what may be a problem for all of us modelers. Future is no longer on the market. SC Johnson sells it under the "Pledge" line. But real quickly Horton ran into the problem of which of the SC Johnson Pledge Products to get? Many of the Pledge Products have a note in the upper right of the label that says "NEW LOOK — SAME GREAT PRODUCT." But buyer beware! Horton actually bought two bottle of different SC Johnson products. Horton warned me "The first two bottles of the new stuff I bought DID NOT leave a gloss after drying. You could not tell any had been applied to the model."

This got my attention rather quickly. Uh Oh! We need to follow up Ed's excellent demo and get the word out so our members get the right results!

"One of the two was labeled Floor Care, multi surface, squirt and mop. It was in a white bottle, picture of a little black and white dog on the label. The other was labeled Floor Care, clean and shine, multi surface cleaner wood-ceramic-vinyl. Purple bottle, no pictures on label."

Both of these smelled like Future. Were nice and glossy when still wet. When dry, could not tell had been sprayed. No glossy finish.

I had queried Hyperscale, after using one, and some idiot replied saying I needed the other one. After I proved to me that he had no idea what he was talking about, I queried again and someone else said get the one with the blue boot...he was specific about that., I don't remember which one, purple or white, I bought first, but neither is worth a @@@@ for my purposes. " Another more selfish reason this got my attention! My own bottle which is getting closer to the bottom of the bottle than the top. Of course the primary reason is I spilled a significant portion out of my bottle about 3 years ago! Yep that is one of the great things about the stuff. It lasts a long time. Albeit with my branching out to try new things I may begin using this quicker. Note the original logo "Future" with the atom symbol on the label! I can just feel the atomic energy on my model work bench!

Ed was kind enough to share a photo of his bottle. It must be a transitional bottle since it carries the Pledge logo front and center but if you look next to the word FINISH you will see the Future Atom.

"Doggie Bottle" Not what we want!!!!

Lynn's Old Bottle & Workbench

Current Level

Horton continues his saga: "The people in the big boxes down here had no idea what I was talking about...they just stock shelves." It is interesting, a quick search on the internet shows that some rock statue carvers rely on coating their carvings with Future to get that sheen. Maybe other crafts use this stuff as well. "Anyway, sent an email to S.C. Johnson outlining the problem. A nice lady replied, obviously thought I was crazy to be waxing model airplanes, but could order blue boot from them for something around $10.00 which included postage. Her email, which I've probably deleted, implied I could only get blue boot from Wal-Mart on line, which I did not want to fool with. I had to contact S.C. Johnson in Racine, Wisconsin, but they kindly sold me a bottle of the good stuff."

LOOKS GOOD—BUT NO CIGAR!

In the meantime I searched several stores in the Chattanooga area. It amazed me the number of products under the Pledge label that looked the part! The Wood Floor Care product to the left really looks and smells the part. But caution. It just ain't the same. And speaking of smell. Some of their products have a citrus smell. Just what I need at my model table. Albeit one with a Kerosene JP-7 smell would work great on my Phantoms!

Go figure—all we need now is scale smells!!

Ed's Bottle &
Workbench

Ace Hardware sells the Blue Boot bottle in the Chattanooga area for $9.99 per bottle plus tax. There may well be other stores in the area that sell the Blue Boot Bottle. One common link between the good bottles is the word "FINISH" Perhaps that is the key. We need a key as the time between bottles is long. The labels appear to change rapidly. Who knows what the label will be next time we need a bottle?

SC Johnson Says
this is the equivalent to Future

But maybe the last word on Future is somewhere else? I spotted this bottle at Dollar General Store for $2.25. It looks like the right stuff and smelled like the right stuff. The label says Compare to Pledge. Hmm... Buyer Beware! But just Maybe.....Maybe an experiment is coming our way in the Future!

UPDATE 2018

First it was "Future." Then it was "Pledge with Future Shine." Then it was "Pledge Floor Care Multi-Surface Finish." Now it's "Pledge revive it":

(Thanks to Paul Boyer for originally pointing this out on Hyperscale.)

And to Bob Colbert for forwarding this Color Corner! Blue Again!

Most of you know I'm not a daily reader of Hyperscale. I go there from time to time but rely on my buddies to point out items of interest. At build day last week i was told to 'Go There!!' I am a color freak when it comes to model building. There is a famous photo of four P-51's in formation that has been reproduced dozens of times. It is a great air-to-air photo as it shows differing versions of Mustangs within the same squadron (early and later D models (note the tail fillet) plus a B or C in the background). The Mustang in the lead had a yellow nose hood flash and was named Lou IV. In the 1970's many modelers built Lou IV in a blue color on top. The controversies began. Dana Bell who is a world known color researcher has delved back into the controversy. If interested you really should go there!

FUNNY, BUT TRUE

Thanks, but No Tanks

Ever see one of those towering SUVs and think, "Man, that thing is a tank"? You have no idea. A neighborhood in Houston experienced an armored invasion for real. One homeowner, not content with a mere Escalade or Land Cruiser, purchased a Sherman. As in a restored M4 Sherman tank. The 32-ton World War II relic was stationed in front of the multimillion-dollar home of Tony Buzbee. Still functional except for its gun, and acquired at an auction for $600,000, the tank liberated the River Oaks neighborhood from domestic sameness. "It smells of diesel fumes, and it's loud and incredible," one neighbor said. But others engaged in battle. The first shot came in a letter from the homeowners association, warning that the tank "impedes traffic." Then came a flurry of parking tickets. At first Buzbee, an attorney, resisted. "They can try to tow it," he told TV station KHOU. "Until I decide to move it, it's not going anywhere." He eventually surrendered; the tank retreated to his ranch in East Texas, where, he says, it will do what tanks do best: run things over.

Photos From IPMS/Atlanta Model Show

Tim Simmons provided these photos from the show. Saturday Feb 11th IPMS/Atlanta held its annual show in Marietta at the Lockheed Union Hall. Mike Moore and myself popped for a vendor table and enjoyed a pleasant day selling off some of the stash and talking with our customers and those in Georgia we know. Q came by in the middle of the day. Tim Simmons and Bob Colbert were there all day, and all took turns sitting at our table to rest feet or temporarily hide purchases. Easy trip, short ride, always a pleasant atmosphere at their show.

Special Restored Warbird

For those that may remember my brother and I took our Dad to an Air Show back on October 7th last fall. Knowing his enthusiasm for all things aircraft it should come as no surprise that he sent this link to us just this week. Now, this may come as no shock to those of you that are aware of this fine aircraft being restored but, I had no clue. Please see the following link: <http://mortefontainevillage.pagesperso-orange.fr/marcbrecy/b29.html>

Enjoy!
