I think it should have no ideologues, so Marilyn Marks is off the list..I'm thinking Sy Coleman and other mathematical minds. And not too big a list either. And no rigid thinkers, so MM is off again....

And whatever we do it should be sort of limited. Let's present some options instead of giving free rein to a committee to invent the "Aspen" method, or "aspenizing" the IRV idea. I don't want to reinvent the wheel.....

City residents only, so no Toni. (I have a question, w/ all the early voting (I know, absentee) we do, if someone wanted to challenge someone, how would one do it? Doesn't our voting openness protect someone who wanted to play the system, by requiring someone who might want to challenge a voter, to hang out in your office, in case someone comes in? Or could someone simply watch the book in your office and challenge after the voter has voted if they voted in CC office?

I like the double initials but that req/ might make MM a candidate, so strike three....

And what's Barry so skeptical about? Does he have the right politics for his job? Have we hired a right wing mole? Kidding! completely kidding.

I cruised Henderson NC , wikipedia and the SF websites about IRV. I am thinking about the task force. I have asked Barry Crook to join as he is skeptical about IRV and I believe a good analytical thinker. Should I ask Council for suggestions on members? City residents only? Should members have double initials? KK, JJ, SS?

And way to go KK on IRV! Now you can def. check that off your best year yet sheet!

I was wanting it to have the greatest margin of support but looks like it got beat out by a hair by the open space question—which is odd as I thought that would be less popular....

Now we just have to get a task force together to agree on something....maybe that wasn't such a good idea after all....
