

Dr. Tyra Oldham, is an entrepreneur, business professional, and consultant able to convey complex ideas. She delivers strategies to businesses and professionals in the public, private sectors nationally and globally. She speaks, writes, trains to develop professionals to empower, innovate, change for sustainable solutions.

Tyra is an organizational and business development, and operations professional serving companies such as, Arnold IT, Toyota, P&G, Ford, Cargolux and more. She has taught Entrepreneurship at Xavier University, as well as, Operations and Organizational Development at Northern Kentucky University. She has performed consultancy services and research in Africa, Europe and Russia. She uses her expertise in business, Knowledge Management, Organizational Development, Organizational Change, Operations, Supply Chain, Intercultural Communications, Relational Management with a niche in Multidisciplinary Thinking, which she uses daily as the President & CEO of LAND sds a green developer, sustainable engineer and project manager as a green integrator, clean energy and sustainability company. As CEO of LAND her social mission is to green-up the world, write and speak on the growth of green and sustainability.

She has a doctorate in Organizational Development, MBA in Operations and IT, and Certificate in Women's Studies from Miami University. She earned a Certification from Moscow Business School in International Business. She holds B.S. in Business and Economics from Fisk University.

As a recognized business professional and educator in Sustainable Solutions, Business Development, Alternative Energy and Green. Tyra Oldham has been Able to convey complex ideas within projects, organizations, non-profits, manufacturing, construction, and product and business development. As President of LAND sds, she demonstrates a Strategic area of expertise within Leadership, Energy Efficiency, Lean, Material and Project Management, Operations, Multidisciplinary Integration, Process, Design, Development, and Organizational Effectiveness. She is responsible for building a company that delivers green results through integrating business management, development and IT solutions.

Tyra has create name recognition for LAND sds and increased global awareness of green sustainability through delivering presentations to small businesses and fortune 500 companies on the importance and cost effectiveness of going grey to green. Most recently she addressed her peers at the 2010 World Green Symposium. With a focus of delivering low cost solutions, Tyra's management style has been to provide business consultancy in globalization, client management, organizational development, operations and infrastructural support.

Tyra's career includes leadership roles in the auto, engineering and transportation industry, where she managed Tier I supplier relations to promote, produce and develop women and diverse owned businesses. She specialized in supplier/buyer engagement to increase the diverse footprint across all buying groups.