5 Reasons to Play a Musical Instrument

Learning to play a musical instrument offers a lot of benefits to your child. If there's one thing you should learn in your lifetime, it is how to play an instrument. Here are 5 reasons why:

1. Playing a Musical Instrument Makes you Smarter

Many studies have been conducted on the effects of music to the brain. Scientists say that children who are exposed to music or those who play an instrument do better in school than those who don't. Recent research suggests exposure to music may benefit a child's reading age, IQ and the development of certain parts of the brain.

2. It Teaches Self Discipline

Learning to play an instrument is like learning to speak another language and it can be challenging at times. One of the qualities music players possess is discipline. You have to be disciplined in order to master playing your instrument. You have to set time each day to practice.

3. Playing a Musical Instrument Relieves Stress

These days students can feel stress in lots of ways. Have you ever noticed that when you hear music you feel more relaxed or happy? Playing music is one of life's simple joys, it helps calm the mind.

4. Sense of Achievement

If you're a beginner learning to play your first piece, it can be frustrating. But once you've mastered it, the satisfaction you'll feel is priceless. Never mind if it's just a simple piece, believe me you'll never forget the first piece you've mastered. You are one more step closer to achieving your goal. That is certainly something to be proud of.

5. Playing a Musical Instrument is Fun

Sure it can be a lot of hard work but there is no denying playing an instrument is fun. Once you get better at it, opportunities will arise for you to share your newly learned skill with your family and friends. Concerts, recitals, marching bands, jazz groups, and rock and roll all could be in your future. Playing a music instrument opens up a world of possibilities that will surely enrich your life.
