FAMILY TIME IMPORTANCE

You don't have to spend huge amounts of money to have a meaningful family life. Children love the most simple, repetitive kinds of activities. They want to be read the same stories hundreds of times, and hear the same jokes long after they've heard the punch lines. These interactions with parents are often more fun than expensive toys. Dr. James Dobson says: A friend of mine once asked his grown children what they remembered most fondly from their childhood. Was it the vacations they took together or trips to Disney World or the zoo? No, they told him. It was when he would get down on the floor and wrestle with the four of them. They would gang-tackle the 'old man' and laugh until their sides hurt. That's the way children think. The most meaningful activities within families are often those that focus on that which is spontaneous and personal. Busy and exhausted mothers and fathers, especially those who are affluent, sometimes attempt to "pay off" their kids with toys, cars and expensive experiences. What girls and boys want most is time spent with their parents—building things in the garage or singing in the car or hiking to an old fishing pond. Those moments will be remembered for a lifetime. You say you are so busy and tired? If so, rearrange your priorities and start making some changes.

For as often as you eat this bread and drink the cup, you proclaim the Lord's death until he comes. 1 Corinthians 11:26
