Celebrating International Women's Day

be inspired – local talent – our community

Krissa Wilkinson

Krissa was part of grass roots feminist activism in Melbourne, campaigning in theatre and in demonstrations, on several issues regarding women's human rights.

Krissa moved to the Mid North Coast in the 80s, with other creatives in a sea change. Krissa is well known for her work in education, the community and arts.

Driven by the belief that art and culture can transform, shift thinking and generate belonging, Krissa has devoted the past 30 years to community cultural development; teaching, performing and providing creative experiences as founding member of Wauchope Community Arts Council.

Kelly King

Kelly is President of the Hastings Business Women's Network (HBWN). Within this role she combines her extensive marketing experience with her passion for making a difference in our local community. Now in its 20th year, the HBWN is committed to encouraging, empowering and educating women in business and raising awareness of the contribution of business women to the local economy and community.

HBWN host an annual Hastings Heroines breakfast that recognises women who make a positive difference in the Hastings community. Held on 8th March, this event raises much needed funds for Liberty Domestic and Family Violence Specialist Service.

Kelly is also a freelance marketing consultant and co-founder of Dyslexia Mid North Coast.

Debbie Deasey

Debbie has worked in health for more than 30 years, in various roles, and for the past 12 years has been employed as a Nurse Practitioner at Port Macquarie Base Hospital.

She has completed a Doctorate in Philosophy and is passionate about research, health and connecting to the community. She is also an author, with her first young adult novel due out at the end of the year.
