Implementation of Part Three of the Trade and Cooperation Agreement

At this event the speakers will draw on their research conducted on behalf of the Scottish Parliament reviewing the impact of implementing Part Three of the Trade and Cooperation Agreement (which provides for law enforcement and judicial cooperation in criminal matters). They will discuss the key operational deficits caused by Brexit and how some issues could be ameliorated by strengthening cooperation between the UK and EU. The research is timely as the TCA is due to be reviewed in 2026. The authors will discuss what they believe is achievable during the review and what the UK and EU's key priorities should be. The report titled 'UK-EU Law Enforcement and Judicial Cooperation in Criminal Matters Under Part Three of the Trade and Cooperation Agreement: The Impact on Scotland' can be found here.

Speakers

Helena Farrand Carrapico, Professor of International Relations, Northumbria University
Gemma Davies, Associate Professor, Durham Law School

Gemma Davies: Gemma's research interests and expertise lie in the field of transnational criminal law. Her work aims to understand barriers to criminal justice cooperation, particularly between the UK and other states and seeks to facilitate better cooperation which also adequately protects the privacy and fundamental rights of citizens. In recent years her work has focused on the implications of Brexit and considered the growing need for cooperation in policing of the dark web. She is President of the European Criminal Law Association (UK).

Helena Farrand Carrapico: Helena joined Northumbria University in April 2019, where she is Professor of International Relations and European Politics, as well as Jean Monnet Chair. She is also Director of Research and Knowledge Exchange for the Social Sciences Department.

She has published over 20 peer-reviewed articles, 5 books (1 co-authored and 4 edited volumes), 15 book chapters and 7 special issues in the field of European internal security in high- raking Social Sciences journals (such as the Journal of Common Market Studies, The Journal of European Integration, European Security, Geopolitics, and Crime, Law and Social Change). She is one of the four editors for the UACES/ Routeldge Series on Comptemporary European Studies, and she is a BISA elected Trustee (2022- 2024).
